It requires the use of two images: an image of the subject's face on a background that may be complete, and one of the subject's face on a transparent background, which you can then blend over the former one. In addition, you can use up to 8 different people, each with the same makeup and posing. Similar to the other tools, it's pretty easy to use: just press the "use mask" option and determine whether you want a 2D or 3D view. There are many tips out there, but a good place to start is underexposure, which is the most common issue with raw images. Once you've repaired the exposure problems, you can then adjust the contrast or tonal range. Image sharpening is also a very useful tool, as you'll notice with any Canon camera. The adroit layout of the program makes adding new layers quickly easy, while the filters have a "bag of tricks" quality that will produce appealing results within minutes. The extensive collection of tools go far beyond what is found in a similar price range.

The layers can be assigned individual effects like the red-eye effect. Young beginners can apply layers by auto-layering. You can also use the mask option to apply layer effects only to those specific areas. You can also get to work quickly using the new Layer Mode . You can create patterns easiest using the Rectangular or Square options. Using the rectangle selection one can resize the selection to any desired dimensions and the square selection will let you resize it to the exact desired dimensions. One can also selectively crop, adjust color and lighting, add visual effects to specific areas, and so on. Raster and Vector are the two options for tracing and illustrator making.
