. One time same timeQ: C# send email with attachment using system.net.mail I'm trying to send an email with attachment but am having a bit of trouble. I can send the email without the attachment, but when I add the attachment it sends the email without the attachment. Does anyone know what I'm doing wrong? System.Net.Mail.MailMessage m = new System.Net.Mail.MailMessage(); m.To.Add(new System.Net.Mail.MailAddress("a@b.com")); m.Subject = "Email Subject"; m.Body = "Email Body"; FileStream fileStream = File.OpenRead("c:\\test.txt"); Attachment data = new Attachment(fileStream, "test.txt"); m.Attachments.Add(data); smtp = new System.Net.Mail.SmtpClient("localhost"); try { smtp.Send(m); } catch (Exception ex) { } A: I had exactly the same problem. I'm using Windows 8, the problem might be on other OS. I solved it by appending the attachment to the mail message, rather than using Attachments.Add(). For example, the code I used (in C#): Attachment attachment = new Attachment(your_file, "your_file_name.ext", MediaTypeNames.Application.Octet); MailMessage mail = new MailMessage(); mail.IsBodyHtml = false; //The body mail.Body = "The text of your message here"; //Adding the attachment (note: it must be added before the body) mail.Attachments.Add(attachment); smtp.Send(mail); UPDATE: As I've noticed my solution didn't work for me, I got it to work on my Windows 8 PC. I've had to change my code as follows: Attachment attachment = new Attachment(your_file, "your_file_name.ext", MediaTypeNames.Application.Octet); MailMessage mail = new MailMessage(); mail.To.Add("mymail@mymail.com"); mail.From = new MailAddress("mymail@mymail.com", "subject of f988f36e3a
